THIRD TIME'S A CHARM FOR WAYWARD CAT

By Phil McPeck

May 18, 2013, was a warm day and Leah Peer was tending to things around the southeast Aurora home she shares with her husband, Jeff, and three cats. Sometime during the day she drew blinds against the sun, and at the same time blocked out an awareness that the screen door was open.

Tango, a purebred Abyssinian that the Peers moved with them from Buffalo, N.Y., was aware of the open door, though. And in a minute of inattention, he slipped outside into a world of lawns, fences, neighborhood traffic, and not too far away the always-busy South Parker Road, the state highway that borders the east side of Cherry Creek State Park. The park's 4,200 acres of wilds conceal myriad threats to domestic cats, from coyotes to snakes, if Tango dared venture that far.

Leah Peer did all of the right things when Tango went on the lam. "We looked high and low, all over the place around here. We put up posters on light poles," she said. She checked with neighbors and local animal control.

"I even had a friend who called a pet psychic, which I didn't put much stock in," Peer said. The psychic said Tango had been hit by a car, she said.

Early on Peer also registered Tango with a lost pets website. There are many with both free and paid features, such as lostmykitty.com, petamberalert.com, tabbytracker.com and petkey.org. "I followed that for over a year," she said.

Additionally there are sites created for specific geographical areas, such as the Facebook page called "coloradolostfoundpets."

Fast forward to December 2013, seven months after Tango disappeared, and to MaxFund Animal Adoption Center on the edge of downtown Denver. A visitor there fell for a cat named Copper and took him home. That adoption didn't work out, though; Copper was not as cuddly and compatible with his new family as they had envisioned. Around the end of May 2014, he was returned to the MaxFund shelter.

Maxfund, as Denver's premier no-kill animal shelter, prides itself on two things: giving its "residents" the health care they need through its public, low-cost veterinary practice — MaxFund Wellness Center, 1000 Inca St. — and giving them whatever time they need to find a permanent home.

Copper got the first when MaxFund veterinarians identified him as a special-needs cat who required a prescription diet for a sensitive stomach.

In fall, Copper again caught the eye of a MaxFund visitor and was adopted. But forever in his next "forever home" lasted only a month. Again Copper found himself in the "shy cats" room at MaxFund, with co-founder Nanci Suro fulfilling the promise of unlimited time at the shelter.

The multi-windowed shy cats room is a few steps from the large, glassed-in Ol' Barn Cat room and its twin, Janet's Room, just off the cat shelter lobby. Those bright, airy rooms for the no-kill shelter's most social cats also feature enclosed areas in which cats can roam perches in the outdoor air, bask in the sun and interact with passersby. Residents of the shy cats room are just as curious, playful, "talkative" and adoptable as other cats and make fine pets, but they're a little more skittish. They're not as wary of humans as residents of the feral cat room, but don't expect them to be lap cats, as one MaxFund worker puts it.

Soon after Copper was returned to MaxFund for the second time, Leah Peer received a Facebook message: "Someone has reported a cat that meets your description in a no-kill shelter." Peer said she figured it was a scam stemming from the registering of Tango's disappearance on the Internet about 18 months earlier. Nonetheless she followed up.

In a picture of Copper, "The coat looked a little too bright and the eyes looked a little too green," Peer said. But Copper wasn't a lap cat and neither was Tango. Peer said she called Tango her "puppy cat" for his penchant to follow her everywhere. But "He didn't like to be picked up," she said.

FROM THE WORLD OF GUS

By Gus Suro

Snow! The word makes all two-leggers' faces get pale and their fingers clench. The word probably makes their toes curl up too, but you can't tell because they always cover their feet. They must think their hind toes are really something special. Personally I prefer feet with a little fur on them, don't you?

But I didn't mean to talk about ugly feet. Snow is much more interesting. Gypsy and I just love it. We love it in all its stages. When it is coming down, snow is beautiful and it makes everything it touches seem like a fairy land. The same yard with the same trees changes into something else. It's magic!

When the snow starts to cover the grass, it makes it much more fun when we get let out. It's the same route: out the back door, across the porch, down the back steps, and across the yard to Squirrel Corner. But it is different because the snow flies up around us. It reminds me of running through the puddles of standing water back when we lived on the farm in South Carolina. Coming back from a walk down to the lake, Gypsy had to be on a leash to keep her from taking off and running all over the county, but I was free to choose my own route. On the way to the lake we both stuck to the path (unless some wild thing would appear) because we were in a hurry to get there. Coming home I would crash through the woods on either side of the trail, both to make Gypsy jealous and to just have fun.

But if there were puddles, I would splash through every one of them. That would make Dad shout at me. I think he didn't want to bring all the mud and water into the house. What can you do? I don't want Dad to be mad at me, but he usually laughed it off. And you can't let an opportunity like that go by.

Sorry I got off track today. The truth is that Gypsy and I love snow. That's the TROOF!

Husband Jeff Peer and their son went to MaxFund for what turned into a most-memorable scene for MaxFund employee Brittney Hernandez and other cat shelter staffers. "They were able to come in say 'That's my cat,'" Hernandez said. "We were all shocked. They put him on their laps and were loving on him and he didn't do anything about it."

A couple of weeks before Christmas, Copper, aka Tango, left MaxFund for a third time, but this time in the care of his true owners, Leah and Jeff Peer. As all MaxFund animals are, he was microchipped before his first adoption from there.

Today Tango is on his home-made, grain-free diet for the sensitive stomach and at age 13 is readjusting to his rightful place. During his time away, the Peers lost one of their other cats to cancer and adopted a new one from the Denver Dumb Friends League, Leah Peer said.

She said she wasn't surprised that neither of two adoptions from MaxFund worked out for Tango, in the first case because he wasn't getting along with anyone. She said Tango knew that life wasn't right, or at least it wasn't the life he had known before his escape.

"He's a really, really smart cat," Peer said. And now "There's no question he knows he's home."

Blue Moose and MaxFund thank Joseph and Linda Vumbaco for their generosity. Blue Moose is also thankful to Robin for bailing him out.

You love us...

We know you appreciate what we do for the animals.

So...

Make sure we will always be there – include us in your will.

A CAT'S UNIVERSE

by Snoopy & Gizmo

WINTER IN THE WINDOW WELL

Hello Everyone! Did you enjoy the very cold weather we had? I for one don't mind it too much but then I do not go out in it. Gizmo, however, is fun to watch. He gets on the window sill and paces back and forth waiting for the window to be opened and then he sits at the opening and sniffs and sniffs. First checking for critters bigger than he is who might eat him. We have foxes and coyotes in our neighborhood. Then he has to worry about the neighborhood cat he does not like in his yard. Third, what is the temperature and does he really want to be shut out in the window well for a while? When it is very cold Mom and Dad won't leave the window open for him to go back and forth. He has to scratch at the window to let them know he is ready to come back inside. Then there are the times when they open the window, and he takes a couple of sniffs, jumps in the air, turns and runs down the couch and back up stairs. You would think someone set off a firecracker the way he jumps and runs.

Mom says just plain old window wells are not very inviting (whatever that means). So to make ours look nice she has a picture of a garden all the way around. She also decorates it for the different holidays and some things just stay there all the time. One of the "stay all the time things" is a statue of "Grumpy" holding a lantern that really lights up at night. Well, when we get snow coming from the west, Grumpy gets a snowdrift on his nose. Yes, his nose is big enough to hold one. Anyway, Mom took a picture and sent it to her sister who lives in Florida. I have been there and it is hot! That is also where I got my first and only case of fleas. How embarrassing! Her sister sent back a note saying everyone had a good laugh and that it was 79 degrees there. I must admit that I am getting ready for the warm sun to shine in on the back porch. The cold sun just does not do much for a cat.

Well, guess that's all for now. Here is "Wishing you warm sun soon".

MEET TWO MAXFUND DOGS

By Ilene Johnson

ANNIE

Annie (short for Lady Anne) is a very beautiful Border Collie mix who is a year old. She is a very special girl. When you meet her, and look into her gorgeous brown eyes, you see trust, love, and a potential soul mate.

If you are looking for companion for hiking, walking, running, and visiting the dog park, she is your girl. If you are looking for a friend to cuddle with, she is also your girl. Annie is energetic, gentle, joyful, and loving. She loves everybody, children, cats, other dogs, and mankind in general. And she also loves getting her tummy rubbed.

Annie is a very smart girl. She learns quickly, and strives to please. She knows leash manners, and other commands, and can learn anything you wish to teach her. She is a great trail dog. She runs back and forth on the trail, and never strays; making sure everyone stays together and safe, true to her genetic heritage.

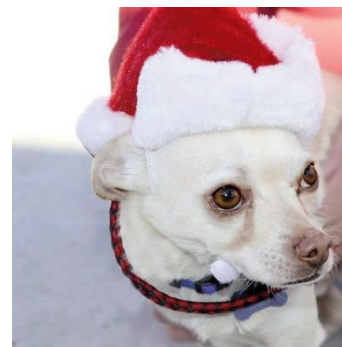

Annie loves going for rides in the car, and is very well behaved when she travels with you. She is also comfortable being kenneled if you need to leave her at home.

Annie needs just a bit of extra effort, because she has seizures, which are mostly controlled with medication. She needs a pill twice a day, but readily takes them with peanut butter, which she just loves. Annie needs periodic blood tests to make sure that her medication dosage remains accurate. Finally, she needs you to hold her head and comfort her when she has an occasional seizure. All so worth the love and wonderful things that she gives you in return!

This beautiful, sweet girl is also available for foster care where her medical needs will be taken care of by MaxFund. If you are active, have a yard, and can spend time with her, she will give you her heart forever in exchange. Sounds like a perfect deal! Contact MaxFund Wellness Clinic at 303-595-0532 to meet the wonderful Annie and let her capture your heart.

TOBIAS

The first thing you notice when you meet Tobias is his beautiful color - he looks like a little fawn. His color is officially listed on MaxFund's website as "red/brown," but I still think "fawn" color is a better description!

Tobias is a Chihuahua short coated mix. This little guy was born in July, 2011, so he is an adorable three years old. Tobias is a bit shy, but warms up quickly once he gets to know you. And once he gets to know you, he is a very loyal little boy. He loves going for walks, getting belly rubs, and playing with his toys. Tobias gets along well with most other small dogs.

You can see Tobias running and playing, and being adorable in general, in the video that is posted on MaxFund's website. Just click on his bio, and then on the video tab. What a cutie!

Tobias is available for either foster care or adoption. The office staff at MaxFund can tell you all about the wonders of being a foster parent. Either way, he would love to meet you and charm his way into your heart!

Dear Friends of MaxFund,

After having dogs my entire life I found myself dog-less after moving to Lone Tree, Colorado. My dog of 16 years had passed on in my arms. I was devastated and decided never to get another dog. It took me a few months before I missed feeding some member of the family and I found myself putting a ring of Cheerios out in the garage, surrounding a bottle cap of fresh water every night. I was feeding a mouse for a couple of months, and then I realized I need a dog. I was drawn to MaxFund because I had heard they were a “no kill” adoption center. Early in May 2004 I decided to find what I would refer to as a very needy dog that needed a forever home. I have always known that dogs thrive on routine. I went to visit that dog at the same time of day for three days bringing a small treat for him that I could give him through the cage. The third day I offered to take him for a walk. We walked around the block together and when the steps to MaxFund were in view he hustled to get up those steps and in to his cage where he felt protected and at home. I hadn't realized that that had been his home for the past seven weeks. He had looked so forlorn and I honestly thought he had only one eye as his fur had grown over one of his eyes and his hair down to the ground.

After filling out the papers I adopted him. I called my groomer and asked if I could bring a dog to her for a bath. The dog was bathed and completely sheared right down to his little pink and grey skin. He had two of the most beautiful eyes I have ever seen and in a short time his fur grew in beautifully. Originally the dear ones at MaxFund had named him Smokey, but I changed his name to “Murphy”. His face just looked like a Murphy.

This coming May 10th, Murphy and I will have been together eleven years. He is healthy and happy as he gets two good walks a day plus a few quick “out to the tree” breaks plus routine feeding times. Murphy constantly shows his appreciation for his “forever” home but I never cease to be grateful for his love and for MaxFund for giving him a temporary home until I found him.

With sincere love, Patricia Gerling

FOSTER AND FOSTER

MaxFund has a robust program for fostering dogs and cats awaiting adoption (contact Erica Jenkins, 303-595-0532).

On his website, NatGeoWild

TV host and dog trainer Cesar Milan offers some tips on dealing with the eventuality of giving up a foster pet:

- Pick a dog to foster that you wouldn't think of as a long-term pet. Foster one that may not be the cutest or youngest, or in some way is a special-needs pet, such as being blind, deaf or missing a limb.
- Assist in the adoption process. Eagerly share the dog's behavior and personality with potential adopters.
- Focus on the positive of the dog finding a permanent home, not on surrendering the pet. Celebrate.
- Foster again.

THERE'S THE RUB

Three canine massage therapists are suing Arizona, claiming the state is wrong to classify pet massage as veterinary care that can be performed only by licensed veterinarians. Arizona is one of about 20 states that limits pet massage to veterinarians; about 20 others require referral or supervision by a veterinarian, the American Animal Hospital Association reports on its website: aahanet.org.

Colorado law says any person may perform massage on an animal if the person does not prescribe drugs, perform surgery or diagnose medical conditions. But as of 2010 the state required pet massage therapists to hold a degree or certificate in animal massage from an approved school.

FINAL EDITIONS

Cat Fancy and Dog Fancy magazines are ceasing publication in favor of two new magazines modeled on their publisher's cat- and dog-oriented websites.

Irvine, Calif.-based I-5 Publishing said it will debut the bimonthly magazines beginning with "Dogster" on Feb. 24 and "Catster" on March 24. I-5 said the new magazines are descendants of dogster.com and catster.com and promise "360-degree coverage and support to pet owners," with news, features, humor, expert advice, products, health, diet, travel and more.

SHORTY NEEDS YOUR HELP!

By Heidi Hahn and Tami Tanoue

Editor's note: Shorty's fundraising page is at <http://www.petcaring.com/helpshorty>. Checks may also be sent to: MaxFund, 720 W. 10th Ave., Denver, CO 80204, attn.: Help Shorty.

Shorty is a gorgeous Black Lab mix girl born in March, 2014. She arrived at the MaxFund with a physique that is startling...shocking, really. Her rear half is twisted in a most improbable way, which makes standing and walking quite a challenge.

There are typically two reactions that people experience upon meeting her for the first time.

First, pity. You'll compare Shorty to the "able-bodied" dogs you know. You'll imagine how daunting her challenges must be. Shorty's appearance may bring tears to your eyes. Take a look at Shorty's video at www.petcaring.com/helpshorty.

Second, AMAZEMENT. You'll be drawn to Shorty's happy, smiling face, and her enthusiasm, charisma and charm will wash over you. There is no way you can have that first reaction for long. You'll know from her playful ways and her indomitable spirit that there's no room or need for pity in her life!

Shorty came to MaxFund on August 29, 2014. She was relinquished because her primary caregiver passed away. The family had multiple dogs in the home and realized that caring for Shorty was an enormous undertaking. The relinquishing paperwork stated that the family had had her since birth. There's no mention on what happened, when it happened, or how it happened: "She has always been like this," is what we were told.

Shorty's had x-rays taken, and they're pretty shocking. One vet we consulted described what she saw as "hemivertebrae (deformed spinal bones) on steroids with nuclear waste and zombie venom." There's shock that she's even alive, much less thriving. You hear moans, groans, and just disbelief in general.

So can Shorty be "fixed"? Well, Shorty will be the first to point out she's not "broken"! What she needs is your help to be the very best Shorty she can be. Professional physical therapy will allow her to build her strength, balance, and endurance. We have started working with the fine folks at CRCG Canine Rehabilitation Group, and have consulted with the professionals at Ortho Pets as well as CSU's therapy group.

All this is very expensive, of course. But with your help, Shorty can get the assistance she needs. Shorty is full of life and spirit and joy. Although her body has improvised a way to get around, physical therapy will greatly improve her mobility. We hope the therapy can also assist in dealing with the incontinence issues that are associated with her condition. Ultimately, we'd love for her to be able to find a great forever home. But until and unless that happens, she will always have a place at MaxFund.

We've set up a fundraising page at <http://www.petcaring.com/helpshorty>, with a goal of $10,000. This amount will allow her to get several months of intensive physical therapy at CRCG to strengthen her muscles and improve her mobility and balance. We plan to train volunteers to assist her with additional exercises, too.

So please go to <http://www.petcaring.com/helpshorty> and help if you can. Checks are also welcome, and may be sent to: MaxFund, 720 W. 10th Ave., Denver, CO 80204, attn.: Help Shorty.

Shorty is the embodiment of MaxFund's mission, and we depend on your generosity and support to fulfill that mission. THANK YOU for helping Shorty.
